CIRCUIT COURT
IN FIFTH WEEK

Another Week Of the Civil Docket Began Yesterday.

UNHAPPY COUPLES DIVORCED

McLean College Next Important Case To Be Tried.

Judge Hanbery did much in clearing the civil docket last week. He adjourned court in the afternoon Saturday long enough to allow the Progressive party the use of the court room for holding their convention and allowing the members of the new party a chance of hearing Mr. M. J. Holt, an apostle of the Roosevelt doctrine from Louisville. This week will be principally devoted to the trial of civil cases, the most important of which is that of the trustees of McLean College against the Hopkinsville Water Co. The suit is brought to recover damages for the loss of the building by fire last February, the plaintiffs claiming that the Water Co. failed to furnish water for extinguishing fire when first discovered.

$275 Damages.

The jury in the case of Cherry Bros. against Christian county, which consumed several days of court last week, Saturday afternoon, returned a verdict allowing the plaintiffs damages in the sum of $275.

The case attracted considerable attention and opinion was much divided as to what the jury would do. When filed the Cherry Bros. claimed that they had been damaged by the county road officials to the amount of $2,000 by drying up a spring in their stable lot. Judgment for $500 was obtained in the first trial when Judge Cook was on the bench. The case was taken to the Court of Appeals and a new trial ordered.

The case of John P. Frowse against E. D. Henderson was opened for trial after a jury had been empaneled yesterday morning at 11:20 o'clock. Mr. Frowse sues for recovery of $663 for trees he alleges he was not allowed to cut under a written contract. Fifteen witnesses on one side and fourteen on the other are to be examined and the case is expected to occupy part of two days of the court's time.

News has been received from a private source that the State Board of Control has decided to make a change in the office of Steward of the Western State Hospital. The new man will be Mr. W. J. Chiles, formerly receiver at the institution, but for the last ten years a popular commercial traveler. Mr. Chiles is a Democrat and has long been an active party worker.

The present steward, Mr. S. A. Pate, of Breckinridge county, has made an excellent record during the four years he has held the place and was strongly endorsed for reappointment by citizens of all parties. It is understood that he will be taken care of in one of the other institutions. The change will be announced in the near future.

SCARCITY OF STONE

The bitulithic street construction has been greatly retarded for a week or more by the inability of the contractor to get screenings on the local market. DEATH CLAIMS
BRIGHT GIRL

Miss Tony Ware's Cheerful Life Ends In Great Sorrow.

VICTIM OF WHITE PLAGUE.

Expired At The Residence Of A Relative In The Country Saturday Evening.

Death claimed Miss Tony Ware at 6:30 o'clock Saturday evening, at the home of her cousin, Mr. Rawlins Clardy, near Bell, where she had been on a visit for two months. In failing health for a year or more, she went to the country hoping to be benefited by the change, but several weeks ago began a rapid decline and soon succumbed to a series of hemorrhages caused by tuberculosis.

With her in her last hours were her aunt, Mrs. M. F. Crenshaw, and her half-sister, Miss Betsy Ware, of this city. Also Drs. J. B. Jackson and R. F. McDaniel.

Miss Ware was a daughter of the late James Dudley Ware by his first wife, who was Miss Tony Clardy.

She was a young lady of the widest popularity. Of a sunny, cheerful temperament, possessing a bright mind and quickness of repartee, and a sprightliness of manner that made everybody her friend, she went through life looking only upon the bright side of things. Even when ill health drove the sunshine out of her life she was jolly and light-hearted to the end. She was 35 years of age and had for many years been a member of the First Baptist church. Her funeral services were held at 10:30 by her pastor, Rev. C. M. Thompson, and her body was laid to rest in the family lot in Riverside Cemetery.

She was closely related to many of the leading families of Hopkinsville. Her immediate relatives were the sister above referred to, Miss Betsy Ware, and two brothers, Fairleigh and Wallace Ware.

PROGRESSIVES

Organized After Speaking Last Saturday Afternoon.

According to a resolution adopted at the first meeting of the Progressive party on the 5th of this month, the party met in the Circuit Court room last Saturday and effected a permanent organization.

Before entering upon the business for which the meeting had been appointed the crowd, made up of members of all parties, listened to a speech by Mr. M. J. Holt, a Louisville attorney. Mr. Holt's speech was a bombasting for President Taft and an exploitation of the virtues and noble deeds in behalf of the people by Col. Roosevelt. He paid his respects to Mr. Wilson but in very mild terms. His fight was against the President and he urged Christian county Republicans to break loose from the party and cast their lot with the new party.

At the conclusion of Mr. Holt's speech the convention proceeded to business by electing a county committee, of which L. O. Brumfield was made chairman and E. S. Foreman, secretary.

Painful Injury.

Smith, of Gracey, slipped and fell in the doorway of Frankel's store yesterday and in trying to break his fall threw his hand on one of the spikes under the show window, the iron penetrating his hand for more than an inch. The injury is a very painful one, that will deprive him of the use of his right hand for some time.

CARNIVAL
OPENS UP

Spreads Its Tents In Mercer Park For A Week's Stay.

AUSPICES OF THE BAND.

Ideal Weather Make the Prospects Fine For A Big Success.

The Carnival attractions of the Moss Company spread their tents yesterday in Mercer Park, and will show all this week under the auspices of the Third Infantry Band.

The company brings a line of shows that are highly recommended as meritorious, clean and up-to-date attractions. The first shows were given last night and a good start was made, the weather conditions being all that could be desired. The band boys will personally assist in the management of the various tented shows.

Performances will be given every afternoon and evening.

Fishing is Good

Fishing is said to be fine—to those who know where to throw the line. Great catches have been made by Claude Clark and Mat Starling. A party who had heard of the wonderful luck of these two anglers left Wednesday for Rochester, on Green River, to beat the record of the two gentlemen named. The sextette is composed of J. O. Cook, Gus Stevens, Dr. E. H. Barker, Thos. C. Underwood, Robt. M. Fairleigh and R. J. Carothers, Jr. They will be gone a week.

MUTINY OF CONVICTS

And a General Delivery In the Wyoming Penitentiary.

PITCHED BATTLE FOUGHT.

Two Citizens Of Rawlins Are Shot Down In Street and Another Was Wounded.

Rawlins, Wyo., Oct. 14.—A general mutiny raged in the penitentiary here yesterday, during which 40 convicts escaped. A pitched battle took place inside the walls and many fights outside.

Two men were killed in the streets of Rawlins, one was desperately wounded and two convicts were recaptured, following the escape of from ten to thirty prisoners this afternoon. The outbreak was the second in the last 24 hours. About 3 p. m. Saturday twenty prisoners escaped and nine were recaptured before 8 o'clock.

A general man hunt is on. Persons coming into town from the south bring stories of a reign of terror in the country districts. Riders have been sent to the ranches for a radius of several miles, warning the owners to be prepared to defend their property. Several parties who went south on horseback or in carriages returned afoot, their horses having been stolen by the convicts.

COLUMBUS DAY

Arrived and Caused Both Surprise and Trouble.

Saturday was Columbus Day and it came and went "like a thief in the night." The majority of the people had forgotten that a comparatively new legal holiday had been added to the already too long list. Consequently they knew not what to think when they found the printed sign "closed" conspicuously hanging up in the post office. Others were surprised and disappointed when they discovered that the banks were closed and business was suspended until Monday. The day otherwise was not observed.

The Cut-Out Plan.

In this county every effort is being made to get the tobacco raisers to join the association under a three year pledge. With the biggest crop on hand ever raised, probably, it is no wonder that the growers are walking the floor. They should have "walked" some before they set out their big acreage. They've caught the white elephant, now what are they to do with it? The cut-out plan has never been seriously considered here, but it looks now as if that plan will be the best next year and in 1914. Nicholas county is wrestling with the problem, as will be seen from a dispatch from the county seat of that county.

Cutting out the 1913 crop of tobacco is being agitated in Nicholas county, and a meeting of the growers in this county has been called to be held here Saturday, Oct. 12, for the purpose of electing delegates from this county to attend the cut out meeting at Lexington Oct. 16. As the question is just beginning to be considered here it is impossible yet to tell how the Nicholas county growers will decide.

Almost A Miracle.

One of the most startling changes ever seen in any man, according to W. B. Holsclaw, Clarendon, Tex., was effected years ago in his brother, "He had such a dreadful cough," he writes, "that all our family thought he was going into consumption, but he began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, and was completely cured by ten bottles. Now he is sound and well and weighs 218 lbs. For many years our family has used this wonderful remedy for Coughs and Colds with excellent results." It's quick, safe, reliable and guaranteed. AFTER LONG YEARS!

At Einsiedeln, in the canton of Schwytz—the Swiss Lourdes—a remarkable marriage took place in the principal church. In 1870 a wealthy Swiss couple living in the neighborhood became engaged, but, on the breaking out of war between France and Germany, the fiance left Switzerland to serve under the French flag. The couple then drifted apart for the ensuing 42 years, and, strangely enough, each married three times during this period, the husband losing three wives by death and the wife three husbands.

The Danger After Grip

Useless Worrying.

An old author has remarked that there are two things which it does no good to worry about—what you can help, and what you can't help. The latter, because fretting won't help the matter; and in the former, because it is your duty to go and help it, without fretting.

I lost weight until I weighed only ninety pounds. I dreaded an operation and instead began to take Cardui. In a short time I gained 25 pounds, and feel as well as I ever did. SOME DIFFERENCE.

Mr. Croker-King, the well-known actor, tells of an amusing incident of a theatrical tour. A certain town was "billed" for two great rival productions. On the arrival of the train which brought both companies a certain man, bound on business, approached one of the company as he stepped out of a first-class compartment, and, politely raising his hat, said, in all sincerity: "Bey pardon, sir, but are you 'The Darling of the Gods,' or 'The Greatest Scoundrel Living?'"

A Lead Pencil Danger.

In the United States the danger of putting pencils in the mouth has long been recognized, and in all the schools every precaution is taken to prevent the interchange of pencils as well as the moistening of them with the lips. RAREST OF OLD VINTAGES

It is stated that Pierpont Morgan was unable recently to procure a bottle of the most ancient wine in Germany, although he offered a large sum for it. The wine is the famous Rosenwein (rose wine) and is stored in the rathskeller of the City hall of Bremen.

In 1624 the city of Bremen bought and put away a barrel of Rosenwein which was even then considered the noblest and finest of all Rhine wines. The barrel cost $50. What the wine is worth now, reckoning the cost at compound interest for three centuries, has been made the subject of various fantastic calculations.

It is only upon rare occasions that the officials of Bremen permit the drawing of what is considered the city's greatest treasure. About fifty bottles of the wine is left in the barrel and even that is no longer absolutely the original 1624 wine, for whenever any of the wine is drawn it is replaced from one of the "twelve apostles"—the twelve barrels in the rathskeller, which contain the next oldest wine in Germany.

The last considerable withdrawal from the barrel was in August, 1824, when twelve bottles of the precious fluid were sent to Goethe on the occasion of his seventy-fifth birthday.

IT MADE THE BUTT OF CRUEL JOKES AND MANY OF THEM TOO AND SO I BUTT THE JOKER WHEN I SEE ONE. WOULDNT YOU?

HIS CAMPAIGN FUND.

Logically, if large expenditures at and before primary elections are an evil, small ones approach political blessedness and deserve approving publicity.

Salute, then Sergt. Charles C. Campbell of Sandusky, O., for conspicuous gallantry in preserving both his financial integrity and his sense of humor through a recent unsuccessful campaign for re-election to his county central committee. As a statement of campaign expenses the sergeant filed the following report:

"To four glasses of beer at five cents each, 20 cents.

"To one glass of beer for a fellow who said he carried the precinct in his pocket, although the returns prove that he was mistaken, five cents.

"Total, 25 cents."—Collier's Weekly.

WHO WON?

A story of the parade of woman suffragists is being told around the various headquarters of the "votes for women" clan. One of the editors of a New York morning paper which is decidedly "anti," has a young wife who is very much "pro." She announced that she intended to parade. He vetoed the proposition absolutely, and averred that if Mrs. Editor dared to march he would forcibly remove her from the ranks. Determined to show her sympathy with "the cause," but not wanting to disregard her husband's wishes, she dressed in proper suffragist colors and badges and paraded—along the sidewalks from the start to the finish of the procession. Who won?—New York Tribune.

FRIENDLY ADVICE.

The Wood street man had a grouch on.

"What's the matter?" inquired the Smithfield street man.

"You don't care a rap!"

"Oh, cheer up. What's wrong?"

"Life is a burden to me."

"Take an interest in something. Have an avocation. Take up golf."

"Aw, life ain't worth living."

"Then take up aviation."

ITS LOCALITY.

"Is the suit you were bringing still in a state of statu quo?"

"No; it's in the state of New Jersey."

TOM'S MOTHER.

By IZOLA FORRESTER.

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

"Why didn't he come himself?" Mrs. Ellis puckered her lips at the challenge in the girl's tone. She smoothed out her gloves on one knee and smiled—a doubtful, wistful little smile.

"He didn't think you'd ever want to see him again."

"I didn't—for a moment." The tears flickered on the long, dark lashes before Ina could stop them. She stood over near the open window, looking out at the pretty garden and the old Roman seat at the turn of the walk where Tom had first told her he loved her the best in the world. She thought of that night for a moment, until the memory of the morning's news swept it out of her consciousness. The headlines faced her still, Tom's name in wide letters, then the whole flat truth of how he had taken funds entrusted to him and used them to speculate with. It had added that he was engaged to one of the prettiest girls in Harbor View and needed money to keep up her standard of a good time.

"Why did he try to make out he had plenty of money to spend?" she said suddenly, turning on the little, nervous figure. "It isn't true what the papers say. I never asked him for anything."

"But if he didn't take you out good and often, you'd go with some one who could afford to. Not that I'm blaming you, child. Land, everybody likes to have a nice time, and Tom's been pretty well tied up in a business way. I've seen he was worried for a long time, but didn't say anything."

"I noticed it, too." Just for a moment the eyes of the two met in the first gripping sympathy. "Where is he? I suppose he had to go away."

Mrs. Ellis shook her head.

"He's home. I left him lying on the sofa in the dining room, with his head in the cushions, just the way he always did when he'd done something he knew he'd oughter not when he was little."

"I thought the papers said they were going to take him away today."

"He's waiting for them to come now. But he won't run away. I know Tom enough for that. I wanted him to come himself and tell you all about how it happened, but he just couldn't. You know, Ina, he's cared for you ever since you were running up and down Main street on a bicycle eight years ago, hair flying and laughing over your shoulder at some one. When he came out of high school I went down and talked to Mr. Carey at the bank. I used to go to school with Tip Carey years ago, and I didn't mind a bit asking him to give my boy a chance. He started Tom in right away and he was doing well and satisfied until—"

"I came along," Ina spoke bitterly. It was true in a way. She loved pretty things around her. She had told Tom she wouldn't marry him until he could take her to her own home. She didn't want his mother to live with them. She was old-fashioned and just a funny little old lady. Ina's father had been sheriff in Harbor View, and even county treasurer before he died. She was stenographer at the hotel now, but no one except herself knew the air castles she built at her desk. Tom had not usually been included in them. "I suppose he blames me for everything. How much did he take?"

The old lady pinched her lips together again as if she had suffered quick pain, but her eyes were wide and placid.

"About five hundred, all told. He took it out Friday and wired it east and expected to put it right back by Monday. He says he figured he'd clear enough to start in housekeeping right away, and get you the piano, too."

Ina put her hands over her face. The tears were coming faster. She had wanted the piano, and suddenly she remembered the look on Tom's face when she had told him she could have a piano in every room if she married Owsley Rawlins, the hotel keeper.

"If he doesn't put in any defense, how—how long will he be sent away?" she asked.

"It depends. He just wanted me to tell you he did it so he could have things nice for you."

Ina knelt beside the little figure in black, her arm around Tom's mother.

"I'll go with you and see him," she whispered.

"Land, child, you needn't," protested Mrs. Ellis, kindly. "We'll get along. Tom don't expect to hold you, of course. He's made a mistake, but he's going to stand by it and do what he can to make up. But he knows girls aren't made that way. It's funny, ain't it? After you're married, you'll fight to the last inch if he's in trouble, but before you blame him."

"I don't blame him. I want to go to him, now." Ina was pinning on her wide-brimmed hat, her pretty face tear stained and determined, her lips pressed together firmly. "He did it for me and I'm glad he hasn't run away."

The streets were dark as they hurried along. Down at one cross street Ina saw the lights around the hotel. They seemed to throw out a radius of brightness like a lure to the love of luxury in her heart. She slipped her arm around Tom's mother and bent her head to the keen autumn wind that brushed by them.

There was somebody waiting in the shadow of the porch when they came to the Ellis cottage. Ina hardly noticed it. Straight into the hall she went and turned into the dining room. There was no light. She went to the old-fashioned sofa and knelt beside it, her face pressed to Tom's rough, curly hair.

"Dear, I've come," she whispered. "And don't you care. If—if you have to go away for it, Tom, I'll stay here with your mother, and wait."

"And you still love me?" He sat up, haggard and helpless. "After everything—after even this?"

"Your mother says it's a poor love that can't stand the first good puff of trouble, and she loves you, Tom."

Behind them sounded a cough, very low and discreet. In the shadow doorway stood Mrs. Ellis, her widow's bonnet off, her chin a bit upraised.

"Tom, lad, Mr. Carey's asking if you could start in at the bank fresh by Monday. He's taking a little mortgage on the house to oblige me, and there won't be anything said about the shortage. It's paid now."

Tom stood up, tall and square-shouldered in the little room. Ina was close in his arms.

"I'll be there, mother," he called, clearly.

BY-PRODUCTS OF NATURAL GAS.

A chemical analysis of natural gas taken from the average oil well, where considerable gas appears, proves it to contain a very high percentage of valuable paint and an excellent grade of ink. Tests just completed by a prominent manufacturer of ink and paint proves that Oklahoma gas, drawn from wells producing oil, furnishes an unlimited supply of raw material for making high grade products never before used. The most extensive ink and paint plant ever established in the oil and gas fields of this country will soon be in operation in Sapulpa, Okla.

ENGLISH KINGS AND SPORTS.

King George, in announcing his intention of witnessing a football match, shows himself more favorable to the game than some of his predecessors. In 1314 Edward II. issued a prohibition of football. "Forasmuch as there is a great noise in the city caused by hustling over large balls, we command and forbid, on pain of imprisonment, such game to be played in the future." Richard II. prohibited "all playing at football, tennis and other games called corts, dice, casting of the stone, kailles and other such importune games." The same statute was re-enacted by Henry IV., but all attempts to coerce Englishmen into giving up football were hopeless failures.—London Mail.

In Touch With Fashion

What the Smartest Dressmakers Are Now Displaying—Hints That May Help the Undecided

THE ebb and flow of a certain extreme fashion in one season is interesting. If one goes deep into the philosophy of human caprice it is easy enough to reason this out; people who dress well are rather afraid of exploiting an extreme because they feel that those who dress for the moment will take this fashion as their own and commonize it; the latter are not struck with it, and the former, awaiting their time, go back to it, writes Anne Ritzenhouse in the Philadelphia Record.

All this has come about with the pannier. When Mme. Cheruit wore the first one in Paris it started, as you know, all sorts of wild rumors and comments. In a few days all the dressmakers in Paris exhibited panniers as the newest fashion, and in a few weeks the American shops had them. The public did not take to them and they fell from favor. They were merely an advertising scheme, after all, first for an individual, then for a class.

Whether or not the public or the dressmakers molded the first pannier into the zouave skirt of today is hard to tell, but the modification is most acceptable. It is a cross between Turkish trousers and a flour sack gathered at the hem, and yet it is most attractive and becoming to women who have big hips, as well as those who have slender ones. It is probably the skirt of the day as far as exclusiveness goes, and yet it is not well known enough to prevent its being offered on the 15th of August as an autumn fashion.

It is quite simple to explain. The material is soft and is slightly gathered into a high waistband, falls over a flattened hip line to a half-way point between the knee and ankle, and is gathered there into a narrow lower skirt, which is plain or adorned. The gathering is done in such a way that the fullness of the skirt bags over it for about three inches, giving the Turkish trouser effect.

Newest Ideas in Skirts.
Last winter a few gowns were worn over here which had this effect at the foot line. For months preceding January the smart dressmakers had been advocating this quaint method of arranging a skirt at the hem. The method was to cut the skirt seven or eight inches longer than the lining, then turn it under and gather it to the skirt. This produced that full scalloped effect which is now very smart to have at the knees.

It is the same method and is the same idea. It is merely moved up to the body for six or seven inches. The effect is much better, as one retains the slim, tight lower skirt with its trimness about the ankles. This zouave effect is just as smart on skirts that are long as well as those that are short. It is rather effective on a straight two-gored Empire underskirt, which is cut to a pointed train.

Using Flowered Silks.
It has much the effect of a tunic in that it conceals the tightness of the line drawn by the underskirt against the figure in the back, and also hides the not always graceful movement of the knees in a tight skirt. It takes consummate art to make a slim narrow skirt that does not catch and draw around the body in an ugly manner; and so the fashion for fullness from waist to knees comes as a happy afterthought.

Among the midsummer fashions is the use of soft-flowered silks instead of chiffons, or rather they are used as rivals, not as substitutes. The flowered transparent stuff is always lovely, and in its present form it is alluring, especially for hot afternoons and evenings. The use of silks is newer. It came about through the revival of many of the Louis XVI. fashions. That was a great epoch for silk covered with bunches of flowers and later with stripes.

Design is Effective.
This is the kind of silk we are wearing this summer. It is fashioned into the new kind of pannier and is immensely effective. It is not draped as far down on the skirt as the thin chiffons are; it is carried down to the knees or a little above and is lifted slightly in the front. It drops into a baglike effect there and falls close to the slim silk or satin underskirt beneath.

It is better to use satin for the lower skirt than any other fabric, not only because it is the first favorite of the day, but because it presents an artistic contrast to most other fabrics. It has the advantage of bringing out to its best all things that are placed against it as a background, or on which it is placed as a striking accessory. This is the reason that satin is so continually used by those who put art into dressmaking.
Here is a gown that could be copied in many colors and would meet with instant approval by those who are in touch with fashion. It cannot be worn by certain types of women, but it is to be hoped they have the wisdom to know that. The foundation is black, has a pointed train, is made of yellow satin and has an ungathered flounce of cream French lace stretched over it from knees to hem.

Zouave Upper Skirt.
The zouave upper skirt is of yellow silk on which are stamped small bunches of pink roses, green leaves and blue forget-me-nots. It is gathered to the skirt just above the top of the lace and is pulled up by later cordings in the middle from waist down. It extends above the normal waist line for two inches, and the fullness at the back is made into a double box plait, which is unfastened and provides the fullness at the lower edge.

The bodice is quite slim in its fit, is high-waisted to meet the skirt and is finished with a flat circle of the yellow satin caught in front with a pump bow. Above this, outlining a deep narrow V in front and going high in the back, is a fichu of yellow mousseline de soie, which is edged with thread lace. It is caught at the top of the high girdle with a large pink cameo set in a frame of inter-lace and gold ribbons.

The sleeves are small, plain, ending at the elbow, where they are finished with deep frills of thread lace, longer at the back than in front. At the top of each frill is a narrow folded band of the yellow mousseline finished with a tiny flat bow at the back.

This gown can be copied in black satin, black brocade silk and Chantilly lace. It is especially fascinating when the fichu of the black lace is edged with a ruffle of fine white thread lace and the large cameo in the middle is white, not pink.

Again Chantilly Lace.
When the fashion for Chantilly lace came in last summer it was thought to be sporadic and that it would quickly pass away, but it did not. Throughout the winter one has seen more or less of it, usually draped on white satin gowns; but this summer it has taken a stronger hold on public fancy.

The shawls of it which are bought or inherited are not always easily managed, and they are apt to fall to pieces, as those who possess them have found out. The manufacturers met the fashion with new Chantilly lace made on the exact pattern of other days, and this comes in serviceable lengths that are easily utilized and has the advantage of being strong.

The top of the blouse from bust to collar is of white chiffon cloth, and there is a high stock of white thread lace finished in front with a fan-shaped arrangement of the same, which cascades itself down to the bust. Over this blouse of black and white is put a slim coat of black Chantilly lace, which has a high Robespierre collar in the back rolling down into wide points in front, tight sleeves to the wrist and a long peplum that is tight-fitting over the hips, does not meet in front and drops away to a long back that is arranged in box plaits at the waist line.

Arrangement of Belt.
The belt is of black satin fastened in front with an oblong cameo set in jet and finished at back with one folded streamer which ends at the bottom of the coat and is finished with knotted silk fringe. The long sleeves are fastened with small jet buttons from elbow to wrist and are finished with small frills of white silk net edged with a tiny insertion of black lace.

The illustration shows a smart costume of gray linen. The skirt is trimmed at left side with a row of closely set buttons covered with linen of a darker shade, and with braid loops to match.

The little coat has a basque set to the upper part under a narrow patent leather belt; the fronts are trimmed at the left side by buttons, and the right by holes to match; the darker linen is used for the collar and cuffs.

Hat of chip to match, trimmed with a bow of blue satin ribbon.
Materials required: Four yards linen 40 inches wide; one-quarter yard dark colored, 2 1/2 dozen buttons.

HOW INSIDIOUS DRUG RUINED
ONCE-FAMOUS WOMAN.

Member of Board of Managers of Great
World's Fair Dragged Down to the
Very Depths by Self-Destructing
Habit.

Indianapolis, Ind.—In the rogues' gallery, at police headquarters in this city, there is a picture of Annie Meyers, alias "Coke Annie," and after it is written the police record of shop-lifter and general thief. The same picture and the same record appears in the galleries at Chicago, St. Louis, Louisville, Detroit and other places where the woman has been arrested.

This woman was once well connected socially in Chicago, and was a member of the board of women managers of the world's fair. In a well written story of her downfall the unfortunate woman presents a most powerful warning against the use of cocaine.

"In 1894," she says, "while attending to some legal matters my lawyer, who noticed that I was suffering from a severe cold, advised me to try a certain catarrh remedy which would give me relief. He gave me a bottle and that started me on my downfall course."

"From a well-balanced Christian woman, I became a haggard and wretched physical and mental wreck. My thoughts were only for more of that accursed poison—cocaine—that was dragging me down to destruction. From city to city I wandered, and as I was using $10 worth of cocaine a day I was forced to steal. Readers of newspapers were greatly shocked to hear of my arrest in so many different places. As the first effects of the drug produce kleptomania, I was constantly in trouble."

"I had been driven to such a state that I thought the world against me and I made up my mind to fight the world, to steal, kill and play confidence games. I associated with the worst class of forgers, counterfeiters, confidence men and shoplifters. I would break the windows of a vacant house and get in to keep from freezing, so that the money I would be obliged to pay for a night's lodging might be saved for cocaine."

"I invented what is known as the 'cocaine dance,' and would go to evil resorts and dance and a collection would be taken up and given to me. I would run without a hat to a drug store immediately to get my idol. I used to get it and call it my baby and my only friend, cry over it, and laugh and dance like an insane person."

"I once went 25 miles from the city of Chicago to rob a house. I first had to kill the dog, which I did by giving him rat poison. Then I got into the house, stole $1,000 and escaped. At another time, thinking that I did not have cocaine enough to last me until morning, and having no money, it also being too late to go into the stores, I deliberately took a pair of shears and pried loose a tooth that was filled with gold. I then extracted the tooth, smashed it up, and taking the gold, went to the nearest pawnshop (the blood streaming down my face and drenching my clothes), where I sold it for 80 cents and bought more cocaine."

FORSOOK THE HOE TO ROB

Long Rows and the Hot Sun Turned a Californian to "Easy Money."

Los Angeles, Cal.—Cornelius Haasakker, twenty-three years old, and a native of Holland, charged by the police with various crimes, was said the other day by officers to have told them he had become tired of hoeing potatoes and had determined to become a bandit.

According to the police, Haasakker was employed until recently on a ranch. The heat and the long rows of potatoes he had to hoe started both perspiration and thought. When noon came and he realized he had earned only 75 cents, he made up his mind, the officers said he told them, to try crime as a means of getting rich more quickly. He changed his clothes, armed himself and came to Los Angeles. He waited until after nightfall, so the officers said, and in less than two hours robbed three houses, one Chinese, held up two motor parties, attempted to hold up two others and had driven one inoffensive citizen off his own porch.

Haasakker obtained in his two hours, the police said, one pair of opera glasses, minus one lens, and an apron, a red sweater, a pair of gloves and $6.50.

He was arrested in the center of the business district later in the night after his description had been telephoned the police station by one of his alleged victims.

Huge Burglar for Husband.

Palmyra, Mo.—A burglar who broke into the home of John Bross, a farmer, east of this city, the other night had a thrilling experience.

Bross had been aroused by the burglar and was searching the house for him, followed by Mrs. Bross. The burglar took refuge in a closet, and Mrs. Bross, mistaking him for her husband, threw her arms about him to persuade him to take no chances.

The burglar, thinking he had been captured, remained motionless, until Mrs. Bross, in her excitement, disclosed her error. The burglar gently unloosened her arms from around him and jumped through a window and escaped.

In his early days in theatricals John B. Reynolds, for many years an advance agent, was sent out ahead of a feminine star who was noted for her eccentricities and overbearing criticism of those with whom she associated. Reynolds came in for a large share of abuses, and upon his return to New York he told his employer that, rather than go out ahead of this particular star the following season he would quit the business.

"What was the nature of her complaints?" asked the producing manager, who had been in New York all the time and hadn't heard the noise.

"Nature of her complaints?" said Reynolds. "Why, she kicked about everything. Blamed me for bad business, poor railroad service and every other disquieting thing that happened. Say, in one town we played she was invited to a party at a private residence. There was snow on the ground, and in getting out of her carriage she slipped on the sidewalk. D'ye know what she said? She said: 'D— that advance agent. Why didn't he come out here and put ashes on this walk?'"—Kansas City Times.

RECOGNIZE VALUE OF NUTS

More Attention Is Being Paid to Their Cultivation, and Area of Growth
Extended.

The growing of nuts for food is now attracting more attention than used to be given it, and the area devoted to commercial nut growing is extending its northern boundary. Northern nut trees, whether chestnut, hickory or filbert, are now mostly wild; but there are now "nut orchards" in many of the northern and western states. The National Nut Growers' association will hold its tenth annual convention in Mobile, Ala., last October, and in November, 1910, a Northern Nut Growers' association was organized in New York. The extension of the nut-growing area is one of the objects of this association. Among the nuts once thought to be distinctly southern, but now beginning to be grown in the north, is the pecan. In California the English walnut and the almond are among the important products. Many foreign varieties will be grown as soon as they become well enough known to command a market.

MOON CAUSES RAIN.

A new instance of supposed connection of the moon with rainfall claims the support of highly scientific authority. Heavy rains are said to occur in South Africa at intervals of 19 years, and this period coincides with the lunar cycle of maximum north and south declinations. E. E. Nevill, late director of the Natal observatory, finds an explanation in the moon's attraction. The theory is that a permanent cloud belt is drawn along by the moon, and that as the moon nears its farthest point north the mass of clouds is made to impinge on the mountains in Natal, giving excessive rainfall.

REMAINS OF BABY AND ANIMAL DUMPED IN SAME COFFIN.

Infant Dies at a City Hospital, and Mother Claims That She Was
Not Notified of Its Demise—
Undertaker Makes Discovery.

St. Louis, Mo.—The mutilated body of their four-months-old son, Joseph, wrapped in a rag with a dead Angora goat, was recovered the other day by Mr. and Mrs. Stanislaus Maggos, 2008 Cass avenue. The parents at the time were on their way to the grave in potter's field, following the child's death at the City hospital.

Only the front of the skull, the arms and the chest of the infant were contained in the box, in which they and the goat were to have been buried together. The rest of the child's body had been cut away in an autopsy held in the morgue at the City hospital. The lower part of the body had been kept at the hospital for anatomical study.

Crazed with horror and grief at the fate of her only child, the distracted mother, Rosa, 30 years old, told the tale of her infant son's fate.

Being in poor financial circumstances, and with a husband out of work, the woman has been forced, although paralyzed in her left arm and leg, to work for her living.

Unable to take her four-months-old baby to work with her, the mother has been leaving it at the Niedringhaus Memorial Mission, where she paid a few cents a day to have it cared for while she was at work.

She left the baby there the other morning, she says, and went to work. When she returned at five o'clock the matron in charge told her the baby was sick and had been sent to the City hospital about an hour before.

Mrs. Maggos then walked to the City hospital to see her baby, she says. There she was told she could see the little one the next morning. The following morning she went, saw the child for a few minutes, and then went to her work.

At 12:35 that afternoon the baby died, according to the City hospital records. The tracer was notified of the death and instructions given to notify the child's parents, at 2008 North Twentieth street. Investigation shows there is no such number, and the baby's parents were not notified.

"I called up the City hospital," Mrs. Maggos said through an interpreter, and was told the baby's condition was the same.

"I called again the next day, and was told Joseph had died the day before at noon, and that I could have the body any time."

"When the undertaker went to the City hospital he was told the baby had been buried. He telephoned the Potter's Field, and was told the body was then on its way to the grave."

"The undertaker ordered the body held, he says, and went out and got it. When he brought the box supposed to contain the child's remains, he found the parts previously named and the goat wrapped together."

GIRL IS TREED BY BEARS

Minnesota Girl While Seeking a Lost
Cow Has Thrilling Encounter.

Kinney, Minn.—While hunting for a lost cow in the woods adjacent to her father's homestead, seven miles north of this town, Mary McInnes, fifteen years old, encountered a black bear with two well-grown cubs. She was almost upon the animals before she saw them.

Screaming, the girl scrambled over fallen logs and dead brush, the enraged bears coming after her. Coming to a small tree, she grasped the lower boughs and drew herself up until out of immediate danger. The bear hung around the tree and made several attempts to climb it, but its efforts were failures, owing to the small girth of the trunk, which prevented the brute from getting a solid grip. The weather was very cold, and as the evening wore on it became almost impossible for the girl to retain her hold on the boughs through cramps in her arms and the stiffness from cold.

When darkness came on the parents and elder brother became alarmed and started out with lanterns to find the girl, calling loudly as they proceeded through the woods. Miss McInnes heard the calls and endeavored to answer them, but at first found it impossible to make even the slightest sound because of the cold and nervousness. As the searchers drew nearer, however, she was heard calling faintly. The bears must have been frightened by the lantern light, as nothing was seen of them by the rescuing party.

Miss McInnes collapsed when taken from her perilous position. She had been in the tree six hours.

Ducks Clear Hotel of Flies.

Chicago.—The champion fly catchers of Chicago are said to be a flock of yellow ducks at a local hotel. According to the manager, they keep the restaurant free from flies every day. The ducks are kept in a fountain in the main entrance and each morning are carried to the dining room, where the chase for flies begins.

NOT GREAT IN ALL WAYS

Iron Chancellor Had His Weaknesses
Like the Rest of Poor
Humanity.

My recollection of Bismarck, however, when I used to see a good deal of him at Frankfort before he was great is that he was a very gross feeder; indeed, I once saw him devour a fish that smelt so high that it almost made every one else in the room sick. And then his hands were always filthy, and he used to paddle them in his plate in a most unpleasant manner. Except for these peculiarities he was a very agreeable man, talking, it is true, thirteen to the dozen, but with a sort of clever, reckless, dare-devil air.

As a statesman I suspect his reputation is exaggerated. He is an aristocratic Danton; de l'audace has proved a winning card for him, and his successes have been three parts luck and one part skill. His weak point seems to be that he cannot exist without nourishing a rabid hatred against somebody or something, which warps his judgment. First it was the Liberals, then the French, then the Ultramontanes, and now it seems to be the Socialists.

Of all the Bismarckian remarks chronicled by Busch the most useful is that roasted oysters sprinkled over before roasting with bread crumbs and Parmesan cheese are excellent. Try them, my friends, and be thankful to the German chancellor. But the large American oyster should be selected, as "natives" are too small!—London Truth.

LEFT HIM THINKING

He—I can imagine nothing sillier than the conversation of half a dozen young girls.

She—Until you've heard the conversation of half a dozen young men.

THEN AND NOW.

In the community where we were reared it wasn't respectable not to go to church. I remember distinctly that in my boyhood people who were not affiliated with some church were looked upon as pariahs and outcasts. An infidel was a marked man; one used to be visible in the streets I frequented, and I never passed him without a thrill of horror. Our city was long known as 'a poor theater town,' where only Booth in Hamlet and Jefferson in Rip might be patronized by church-going people who valued their reputations. Yet in the same community no reproach attaches today to the non-church-going citizen. A majority of the men I know best, in cities large and small, do not go to church. Most of them are in nowise antagonistic to religion; they are merely indifferent. Clearly, there must be some reason for this change. It is inconceivable that men would lightly put from them the faith of their fathers through which they are promised redemption from sin and everlasting life.—Meredith Nicholson, in Atlantic Monthly.

The first woman wireless operator to receive an appointment is Miss Maggie Kelso, whom the Alaska Steamship company have just placed in charge of the wireless installation of their latest steamer, the Mariposa. Miss Kelso holds a certificate of proficiency from the United States naval department, and understands emergency repairs and the replacing of broken parts. When on duty Miss Kelso will, it is stated, wear a blue jacket with brass buttons, a tailored skirt, and a blue cap trimmed with gold lace.

Study of the Preferences of Various Nations Leads to Some Curious Conclusions.

Some curious conclusions have been reached as the result of studies of what are called the preferred numbers of the inhabitants of different countries. The basis of the investigations had to do with the various denominations of money, postage stamps and other mediums of value.

It appears that nearly all races evince a marked preference for the numbers two, three and five and their multiples. The Mohammedans, however, avoid the use of the number three. Among the French and other Latin peoples two and five are more popular than three, while the English prefer two and three and the Germans three and five.

The Chinese are said to resemble the Latins in their choice, while the people of India have a strong liking for two. The number seven is most used in Russia and other Slavic countries. The higher numbers are not much used except in Spanish-speaking countries, as eleven in Salvador, seventeen in Mexico, nineteen in Spain. The people of Hawaii are said to be fond of thirteen.

IMPROVISED SWINGING COUCH.

A great source of entertainment to our small children this summer is a cheap imitation of a swinging couch. The legs were removed from a stout cot with a strong, woven wire mattress, and this was suspended from the ceiling of a roomy back porch. Heavy iron screweyes, each containing an iron ring, were placed in correct positions in the ceiling, care being taken to find the cross-beams, as the thin boards of the ceiling will not sustain much weight. Four heavy strands of rope were swung from the iron rings and fastened to the four corners of the cot. As many as five or six children can ride in this swing with safety. One small boy insists on sleeping in it at night, and he arises each morning with sparkling eyes and glowing cheeks.—Good Housekeeping Magazine.

SOUTH AMERICAN DIPLOMAT.

Julio Betancourt, the new envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the Republic of Colombia to the United States, represented his country for twenty years at Madrid. During this time his government sent him on several special missions to other European capitals, notably on one to Paris from 1898 to 1901. He was successful in settling the boundary questions between Colombia and Venezuela, and between Colombia and Costa Rica, the latter controversy having been arbitrated by President Loubet of the French republic in accordance with the brief presented on behalf of Colombia by Senor Betancourt. This award gave Admiralty Bay and the adjoining lands to Colombia.

CHIMNEY SMOKE A SYMBOL

Has Many Varied Significances and So Appeals to the Man Who Observes.

"Can anybody tell me," said Mr. Dreamington, "why I like the sight of smoke?"

"Not far from where I live there's a tall stack of a factory of some sort. I love to sit and watch the smoke rising from that tall chimney, rolling sometimes straight up, or blowing this way or blowing that. This smoke plume is our weather-vane. But smoke has many significances.

"See the smoke flying fiercely back from the stacks of an ocean steamer—sign of tremendous energy and conquering power.

"See in some peaceful countryside in the still air of early morning smoke curling upward from the stout chimney of the farmer's home, betokening a stirring within and breakfast soon.

"See the smoke that rises from the campers fire—freedom and good cheer.

"See the smoke of burning incense in the churches—devotion.

"The smoke of the myriad chimneys of the town, activity, endeavor, pushing enterprise and the rich and the poor.

"Smoke is the universal outward sign of man; the world around it signifies everything that human life, savage or civilized, implies. This, no doubt, is the reason why I like the sight of smoke; but I should be glad if somebody could make it plainer for me for my better, keener understanding."

HAD MORE HONEY THAN

Man Who Waited Forty Years for Crop Gets Ten Tons of Product.

Some of the old gray-headed farmers will remember the time when we got short of barrels to contain our extracted honey and your humble servant borrowed the wash-tubs of the neighbors; and when these were all full we borrowed the wash-boilers.

Wash-day came, and the good women came around wanting their utensils. But there was no place to put the honey. Mrs. Root asked, "Oh! won't those bees ever stop bringing in basswood honey?" It was about ten years after the war, and new "extracted" honey was selling in Cleveland as a novelty for 25 cents a pound. I finally told "them" that we would pump the water out of the cistern and scrub it up nice and clean, and fill it with honey. Well, under the stimulus of this great yield of basswood and clover I scraped up money enough to purchase a ten-acre lot in which I planted 4,000 basswood trees; and we have waited patiently more than 40 years to see if another such harvest from clover and basswood would come, and now we have it. Pretty close to 10 tons of honey, both comb and extracted, have been taken off during the last three or four weeks. (The two carloads of bees from Florida have "paid the freight," any way). Praise God, from whom all blessings "flow," and if you, too, my friend, have also been getting a great "flow" of honey, can't you say amen to the above?—From Gleanings From Bee Culture.

MINE OF TREES DISCOVERED

Oak Forest, Buried for Centuries Under a River in Russia, is Well Preserved.

Mines of wood are found in the south of Russia, where they were discovered very recently when the bed of a river was dragged. Not very deep in the earth, but covering an extent of two hundred square kilometers, a forest of oaks was found where it had been buried by some unknown catastrophe centuries ago. The wood is in perfect preservation. The man who found the entombed forest has drawn from his mine many trunks of trees measuring from 120 to 180 feet high and at least eighteen inches in diameter. The mine is worth a fortune, for the wood is of the first quality, and as a result of its long rest underground it has taken the most varied colors, ranging from dark brown to pale rose and running through all the shades of blue and yellow. One hundred and fifty thousand of the ancient oaks have been turned over to the cabinet makers.—Harper's Weekly.

DECIDE YOURSELF.

The Opportunity Is Here, Backed By Hopkinsville Testimony.

Don't take our word for it. Don't depend on a strange's statement.

Read Hopkinsville endorsement. Read the statement of Hopkinsville citizens.

And decide for yourself.

Here is one case of it:

Miss L. A. Hester, Fifteenth and Clay Sts., Hopkinsville, Ky., says: "The pain in my back caused by disordered kidneys was so severe some days that I often felt like lying down. If I would walk any distance or over-exert myself in any way, I was troubled most and if I caught cold it made me miserable. It the morning I felt stiff and sore and often found it difficult to dress. A kidney weakness bothered me. I doctored but found little relief. Finally Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me and I got a box. They removed the pains in my back and corrected the kidney difficulty."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Had Been in Training.

A man who had undergone a court examination by a lawyer in Chicago without faltering for a second was complimented by the lawyer later for his accurate manner of recalling early and minor episodes of his life. "I was well rehearsed for it," said the witness. "Only yesterday I had to fill out an application for a telephone."

There's A Reason.

In selecting a Vacuum Cleaner for our subscribers, both old and new, we bought the best to be found in our opinion and we think we have chosen wisely. They are to be had as cheap as $1.85 and if you want one at that price give us your order and we will have a machine for you in a week or ten days, but not with our name on it and possibly not the manufacturer's name. We have good ones in stock and will be glad to have prospective customers make thorough comparison of our machine with any one on the market at any price, work and material considered. Durability and success in use is our watch-word.

Roasted Victim Alive.

An almost unbelievably cruel happening has come to light at Hiroshima, Japan. There a man and his wife have been arrested for willfully cremating a live man. The prisoners were in charge of a crematorium, and while at work a faint voice coming out of a coffin begged for fresh air. The couple took no notice, however, and proceeded to apply fire, roasting the man alive.

Impure blood runs you down—makes you an easy victim for disease. For pure blood and sound digestion—Burdock Blood Bitters. At all drug stores. Price $1.00.

Explained.

Small Robert did not know the meaning of death, so when he was told that a man across the street was dead he asked his five-year-old sister what it meant to be dead. After a moment's hesitation she answered: "Why, to be dead means that—that you are all in."

DECLINE IN FRUIT-GROWING

Americans Seem to Be Losing Either the Inclination or Skill That Is Requisite.

A recent census report shows that in spite of the great increase in population the output of deciduous fruit merely held its own during the last decade. The area planted to small fruits actually declined more than ten per cent. and the total production of small fruits shows a falling off.

Are Americans losing the skill or patience necessary to raise fruit? Abandonment of this field of production can scarcely be thought of and voluntary, for market prices go higher and marketing facilities better. Some other reason must be sought.

Fruit raising, like most other occupations, is more exacting than it was a few years ago. The day when a man might plant a few acres to apple trees, for instance, and then pay no further attention to them except at picking time, has passed. Trees must be trimmed, sprayed and cultivated if the fruit is to be either marketable or even consumable with pleasure at home. Fruit raising as an industry has developed, like every other industry.

Possibly fruit raisers, as a country-wide class, have not kept pace. Very few industries will thrive without encouragement.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Scotch Dog's Business Instinct.
Left one night on Wagoner mountain with 3,086 sheep by the death of John Sagoday, her master, one female shepherd dog two weeks later delivered to Manuel Saunders, owner of the sheep, 3,085 of the animals, having lost only one during two weeks of privation. The dog's achievement was carried out despite the fact that she was the mother of puppies only a few days old when her master died.—From Our Dumb Animals.

Overlooked.

We wish to make some mark in life. We turn to the distant and far away, when, indeed, the things for us, the things to make our marks upon, the things to do with, grow by, to let us into the desired happiness are the little ones lying just here about our daily path—the overlooked things next to us.—J. F. Ware.

As He Understood It.

A Portobello (Scotland) schoolboy has produced the champion howler of the season. The passage for paraphrase was from Kingsley: "For men must work and women must weep, though storms be sudden and waters deep, and the harbor bar be moaning." "Men and women," said the youngster, "must keep on working though the inn at the harbor is groaning for its customers."

FIRE SPREADS TO BUILDINGS.

Two Stables of Dr. M. W. Williams Burned and Another Saved by Hard Work.

Shortly after noon yesterday a patch of dry weeds alongside the Belt Line South of town was set on fire by a passing engine, starting a blaze that quickly spread to Dr. M. W. Williams' lot near by, setting fire to two of his big stock barns. They were soon burning fiercely, being filled with hay. The Fire Department made a run to the scene, which is outside of town, and the firemen by the use of chemicals succeeded in saving a third stable that was in great danger. All of the Williams & Radford race horses were out in the pastures except Cy Clades, the stallion, and he was gotten out. The loss was confined to the buildings and contents, estimated at five thousand dollars.

ABOUT THE GIRL WHO TALKS

Usually at the Bottom of Her Remarks, and She Becomes a Pest.

Of course, all of you have at least one little friend or acquaintance who likes to talk about herself. Perhaps you have more, if so, I am sorry for you.

If she is one "who neither toils nor spins," her time is mainly taken up in adorning herself with pretty gowns, hats, etc. Then she goes forth on the search for a victim.

Just listen to her chatter! It is all about the "perfectly lovely" time that she had yesterday afternoon—the "elegant" lunch that Jack gave her, his many avowals of love for herself, and (confidentially, of course), that she has allowed him to send her the "magnificent" ring she is wearing today.

Then, should you meet her in a week or so, she will have another tale to tell. Jack and she have had a misunderstanding, and she has discovered that she did not really love him, anyway, but—ye Gods and little fishes—there is another ardent suitor whom she claims is the "one man possible."

This young lady punctuates her conversation with "And he said to me"—"and he thinks that I"—until her friends regard her departure as a relief, and do not long for her return. Do not imitate her, girls, and if you have the slightest inclination to be like her, for goodness sake turn over a new leaf, and talk about something else besides your own affairs.

Have all the merry times you can, have love experiences, but do not tell anyone about it; you may rest assured that when they become really serious the others will recognize it without being told.—Exchange.

WASTE NOT, SLEEP NOT.

"In moving from flat to flat I have seen many a strange sign posted up for the guidance of tenants," a woman said, "but the queerest of all was tacked above the gas range of the last apartment we moved into. It said: 'Please do not go to sleep while the gas range is lighted.' I asked the agent if he considered that warning necessary. He said he did."

"Two women in one of our houses were asphyxiated in that way," he said. "They put something on to cook, lay down for a nap, the flame blew out and they were done for. We don't want any more such fatalities, and have posted up those signs as a precautionary measure."

IN LONDON.

Cabinet Minister—Is my bullet-proof underwear all ready?

Valet—Yes, sir.

C. M.—Have you laid out my asbestos suit?

Valet—Yes, sir.

C. M.—Has the usual detective force assigned me been reinforced with a couple of dozen secret service men?

Valet—Yes, sir.

C. M.—Then call my wife's maid and tell her to let her mistress know I will soon be ready for our afternoon drive.

FOR COLLEGE "SPREADS."

An inexpensive going-away gift that any college girl will appreciate is a box fitted with a nickel plated can opener, a set of nut crackers and picks, a sharp bread knife and strong corkscrew to use at the midnight spreads. If a candy cooling pan, asbestos mat and measuring cup be added, the girl will be envied by her whole set. The gift need cost no more than a dollar.
